Our Story

AIP Publishing is the not-for-profit publishing arm of the American Institute of Physics (AIP). As one of the world's leading publishers in the physical sciences for more than 90 years, our mission remains to inspire and inform the scientific community with research and resources of outstanding value, relevance, and quality.

We publish 38 peer reviewed journals from AIP Publishing and our publishing partners, including 12 open access titles and 2,900+ volumes of conference proceedings. Our journals cover the breadth of the physical sciences, and are highly ranked in terms of citations.

Our Publishing Partners

Through collaboration with our publishing partners, AIP Publishing can support a broader community of physical scientists around the world and bring high-quality research to the widest global audience.

As a society publisher, we are committed to providing our publishing partners with the strategic, operational, and tactical support needed to advance their goals and grow in today's competitive market. Every society and every book, collection, and journal, benefits from our individual attention, collaborative approach, professional expertise, and customer focus. Our size is one of our key strengths—we are large enough to deliver reliable and trusted systems as well as a global reach, yet small enough to provide personal and dedicated service.

Our Industry Involvement

Together with our publishing partners, we work on industry initiatives that help us keep pace with rapid, constant change in a digital world and shape the future of physical science communications. AIP Publishing's participation in these industry initiatives allows us and our Publishing Partners to have a "seat at the table" and take a thought leadership position. AIP Publishing is a leader in efforts to improve and evolve the author experience, peer review, metadata, archiving, and bibliometrics, as well as expand access to research through Open Science.

"AIP Publishing's team of publishing professionals provided the products, tools, and expertise that enhanced the American Vacuum Society's (AVS) publishing portfolio. We have such confidence in our partnership that we signed a five-year partnership agreement, thus allowing us to continue working together toward the successful implementation of our long-term strategic publishing goals."

Yvonne Towse

Managing Director, AVS

"Successful publishing partnerships require a foundation of trust, deep listening, and responsiveness. In spite of the dizzying pace of change in the publishing industry, AIP Publishing builds and maintains a culture of sustained excellence. As a founding member of AIP, 90+ years later we are still publishing in partnership assured that our journal is as much a priority with AIP Publishing as it is with us."

Susan Fox

Executive Director
Acoustical Society of America

"The AIP Publishing team was in constant communication throughout the transition providing the support needed as we changed platforms."

We hope through our partnership we can express our common desire that a very good scientific exchange is an important part of the harmonious world."
